City Council changes Dayton Drive to one-way

by Lisa Parsons

The Lemon Grove City Council held a public hearing to consider designating Dayton Dr. from Skyline Dr. to Englewood Dr. a one-way street at the regular city council meeting Tuesday, January 16, 1990.

Two residents addressed the council, asking that the proposed one-way street be extended further on Dayton Dr. and that the council consider a traffic signal as well.

However, the one-way designation was approved for the shorter distance only by the council and Councilwoman Karen O'Rourke motioned that the Traffic Advisory Commission look into the concerns mentioned by the residents.

The council also adopted a resolution approving an amendment to a development agreement between the City of Lemon Grove and Lee White Toyota. The amendment will facilitate a loan to Lee White Toyota from San Diego Trust and Savings. The bank requested that the City amend the agreement to provide that the City will agree to form the assessment district that is referred to in the agreement, that the City will assign the proceeds of the assessment district bond sale to the bank having made the construction loan and that the bank will have the right to review the selection of the underwriter of the bonds for the new assessment district.

In other business, the council approved the basic design of the new city logos on the condition that a few minor changes in color and size be made by the artist. The new logos should be seen throughout Lemon Grove in the near future!

Lemon Grove VFW Post 2082 will host their first annual "Honors Banquet" on January 27, 1990 at 6 p.m. at the post.

The post will be honoring several outstanding citizens from the City of Lemon Grove. The categories to be honored include deputy sheriff, fireman, school teacher and civil servant of the year.

"We wanted to do something to get involved with the community and let them know we're here," said Martin Cress of the VFW Community Action Committee. "The categories were chosen to hit all branches of people who work in community service," he added.

Mayor James Dorman and retired Chief of Police William Kolender will be special guest speakers at the event.

The banquet is open to the public, but seating is very limited, warned Cress. Tickets are available at the door for $7.50. For more information contact VFW Post 2082.

Water agency suggests winter water conservation techniques

It's winter. Temperatures have fallen. Sweaters are in; shorts are out. But it's still important for local residents to practice those wise water-use habits they used last summer.

Here are several ways that water-waste can be reduced during the winter:

*Water a lawn only when it needs it. Watering on a regular schedule doesn't allow for cool spells or rainfall. Step on the grass, then step back. If the grass springs up, it doesn't need water.

Those people with automatic sprinklers should adjust the auto-clocks to allow for winter weather.

*Check toilets for leaks. The toilet is the biggest user of water in the home; a leak in it can waste more than 100 gallons per day. Put a few drops of food coloring in the toilet tank. If, without flushing, the coloring appears in the bowl, a leak is present.

*Install water-saving shower heads. Hardware and plumbing supply stores stock inexpensive shower heads that will cut shower flow to three gallons per minute instead of five to 10. They are easy to install and still give a great shower.

*Plant drought-resistant trees and plants. Winter is a good time to plant, because winter rains are good for irrigation. Also, by the time the hot summer months roll around, the plants will be partly established.

*Put a layer of mulch around trees and plants. Mulch slows the evaporation of moisture.

For a list of 24 things one can do to save water, call the Water Authority at 297-3218.

Lemon Grove family raises canine companions to provide independence for the physically challenged

by Lisa Parsons

The boys press their noses against the screen, their bodies wriggling with excitement at the prospect of a visitor. As the door opens, they politely step back and seem to smile. "Neumann, McAlister, down." With a final wag of their tails, they settle down, eyes fixed on their raiser.

This well behaved pair of golden retrievers are in training to become Canine Companions for Independence (CCI), service dogs for the physically challenged.

Nancy and David Barnhart of Lemon Grove have also raised two other puppies. "I originally wanted to raise guide dog puppies [for the blind], but they're raised exclusively by 4-Her's. I found out about CCI at the Del Mar Fair and volunteered to raise a puppy for them," said Nancy Barnhart.

Raising a CCI puppy is serious business. All of the dogs are from carefully chosen pedigreed stock that have character traits which will make them ideal for service. "They use predominantly golden retrievers because they transfer owners well," explained Barnhart. "These dogs will stay with anyone who gives them loving," she laughed.

By the time the dogs are two-years-old they will know 89 specialized commands (both verbal and in sign language), 48 of them taught by the raiser. The dogs become physical extensions of their masters by pulling wheel chairs, signaling important sounds, pressing elevator buttons, turning on light switches and performing a variety of basic tasks that help a physically challenged person to be independent.

The puppies live with their raisers from eight weeks old until they are turned over to CCI for advanced training at approximately 18 months of age. From there, the dogs and recipients will spend two weeks together at "Boot Camp" learning about each other.

Cultivating flowers and friends

Charles Henkel brightens days for patients at Grossmont Hospital

by Cynthia O'Neill

A trip to the hospital is never very pleasant especially if the doctor finds something wrong. But there is a man in La Mesa who works magic in people's hearts and helps to take the hurt away. His name is Charles Henkel, and his friends call him the "Flower Man."

He is so named because twice a week, he arrives at Grossmont Hospital bearing gifts of beauty straight from his garden for employees and patients alike.

Henkel and his wife Marge have lived in La Mesa since the landscape was merely empty fields. At the Henkel residence, a garden blooms in a bounty of color, resembling one of Monet's paintings. Roses, camellias, orchids, marigolds and calla lilies are just a few of the posies they cultivate. Guests relaxing in the Henkels' white gazebo, are greeted with a constant visual treat. Hanging cedar baskets overflow with pink chrysanthemums. Vines of ivy cascade over a wishing well. It is easy to see why their garden was one of five chosen for exhibit by the Mount Helix Improvement Association last April.

"Ours was the only garden that wasn't done professionally," said Henkel. "People said they liked ours the best because it's homey, and because it's the kind they could have themselves. There were 250 people here to look at our flowers during the exhibit, but that doesn't mean any more than when neighbors stop to tell us how much they appreciate them."

Both Marge and Charles spend part of each day working in their garden. "I just can't stay out of it when I'm home," said Charles. "When I'm in the house reading or studying, I have to get up and go out about every two hours."

The Henkels come from generations of gardeners. "I grew up on a large piece of property in Ohio, with five brothers and sisters, so we grew all our vegetables and plenty for others, too," said Henkel. "My folks never let anyone visit us without sending them home with a bag of vegetables and an armload of flowers."

This tradition of graciousness continues to be an important part of Henkel's life, though he has had his share of adversity. Recently, he had a second quadruple bypass surgery, but stays young at heart by being around people and generously giving his time and help as a volunteer at Grossmont Hospital.

Twice a week, he goes into the hospital to update and refill the information brochure racks, but his real love is watching the smiles on peoples' faces as he delivers vases of flowers that he and Marge grew themselves. "You really touch people with flowers," he said. "At the hospital, people stop me in the hall to tell me who needs flowers to cheer them up or congratulate them."

In more ways than one, Henkel has saved the day. One of his favorite memories involves a time that he believes his flowers prevented someone from making an impulsive decision. "I brought some flowers to one of the nurses who I heard was having a bad day," he said. "I went into her office and gave her a flower and she burst into tears and threw her arms around me. She was sobbing so hard she finally had to wave me out of the office."

Henkel could not stop thinking about her all that weekend. He brought her more flowers on Monday with an unsigned note that said how much he thought she meant to the hospital, and how important she was to many people. Later that day, he saw her in the hall, and was happy to see her smile.

"She told me that over the weekend she was thinking about not only quitting the hospital, but leaving the field of nursing altogether," he said. "Sunday she went to church and prayed that God would give her a sign telling her what to do. She felt that my flowers were the sign that she should continue working as a nurse."

Little miracles like that happen all the time when Charles delivers his offerings from the garden. "A rose can say so much," he said, "and I hate to think of flowers dying on the vine when they can bring so much happiness to someone. I know people in every corner of the hospital because of my flowers."

"Flowers add meaning to the times," he said, "and gardening is good for the soul."

Nobody could argue with him about that. It is people like Charles Henkel that help keep the day running smoothly, and the patients getting well.

by Cecile, his wife, his children, Bruce and Patty, and six grandchildren.

He began teaching in Lakeside, Ca. in 1952 and transferred to the Lemon Grove School District in 1955. He taught fifth grade there for 22 years and retired with many accomplishments. Jim gave his support to many organizations and was a Life Member in the National Education Association, Phi Delta Kappa, PTA and the Air Force Association.

Of all the accomplishments in a man's life, the most rewarding recognition is praise given by his peers. In 1972 Jim received the WHO award from his fellow teachers. Who stands for "We Honor Ours" and its an award he treasured very much.

Harry Robinson, Jr., Musician, 66

Services for Harry Robinson, Jr. 66, were held at Greenwood Mortuary January 12, with entombment in Greenwood Mausoleum. He died on January 1 in a hospital.

Robinson was a Lemon Grove resident for over 30 years. He was born in Oakland, California and lived in San Diego County 50 years. He was a self-employed pianist and a member of the San Diego Musicians Union since 1946. He had been a San Diego Veterans Hospital volunteer.

He is survived by a sister, Dorothy Everett, of San Diego and her family. Other survivors include cousins on the west coast and in England.

Wispy trail of news yarns

In the news business it is interesting to observe how one element of a story leads to another. While the relationship is usually subtle, there's just enough connection to make one story a second cousin to another.

To make a point, it started when I became agitated with the unfairness of the California Lottery operation. It is top-heavy. This week's $30 million top award is not only unfair but it served as an opiate among a huge number of people made gamblers by the state operated pool. Bettors have fantasized about the spending of that huge, but almost unattainable, pot of gold.

There is a growing number of dissidents who dislike the immensity of the top prize. I am one of these. We think that the top award should not exceed a million dollars. The rest of the pot should be spread among the lesser winners starting with the lowest and the lowest should be for $10 with a guarantee that every 20th would be good for that amount. There is nothing wrong with carrying no-wins. But the present ration of an estimated $2 for every 50 or more tickets is robbery and the $30 million top award is obscene.

The subject of money will eventually make sports fans cringe. At the time of this writing, Kevin Mitchell, San Francisco's outstanding baseball player has had his salary raised $1.423 million to $2.083 million setting off demands from unsigned players for huge increases.

Fans are impressed by the big salary-numbers, as well they should be. They'll be paying for it!

More on sports: Sportscasters in particular. The cops picked up former TV Channel 10 sportscaster Walter E. "Fast Eddie" Alexander last week. He had pleaded guilty to mail and bankruptcy fraud and other violations.

He was a good reporter but a lousy businessman. He was charged with bilking investors of $1.6 million to support a business enterprise which collapsed. He will soon face a federal court here.

I remember Fast Eddie when he was at Channel 10. We often sat together at press conferences. Even when Eddie was sitting still he appeared to be in motion. He talked fast and all of that helped give him his sobriquet.

Many sports press conferences are hosted. Luncheons are followed by the speaker who parrots a handout which was given to reporters as they arrived.

When lunch was finished and the speaking was about to begin, Eddie's paging device would sound off. It was a loud one. Eddie promptly arose and charged out of the meeting room to phone the station. It happened frequently enough that I asked about the coincidence of the paging call simultaneous with the starting of the speaker.

He pointed to a button on his paging device. "It only goes off when I push this button," he said.

Eddie was pretty fast with a free meal, too.

Baseball strike old story

The way baseball folks are talking about strikes gets a cold shoulder from San Diego Padre Vice-President in charge of Baseball Operations and (Field) Manager Jack McKeon.

McKeon was fielding all questions after the premiere showing of the Padres 1990 Highlight Film "Good Vibrations" at Harbor Island's Sheraton Grand last week.

Jack thinks on his feet with the poise of a well seasoned politician and was equal to the challenge when one of the invited guests asked about the likelihood of a player's strike.

"Strike. The same as always. We'll have 4 balls for a walk and three strikes and you're out," says McKeon. "Next question."

McKeon has the second longest title in baseball. Only Bill Beck, who has "Assistant to" in front of all the words listed in McKeon's grand job description, has more. They make quite a team.

Beck has been McKeon's sounding board, alter ego, strong supporter and close friend the past 20 years. His appointment as McKeon's assistant really cleared the decks for "Trader Jack's" optimistic flight into the new season.

McKeon sometimes works around the clock, as he did trading the Padres back into contention in a 24 hour whirlwind of negotiation dogfights. He needs a trusty wingman flying his flank.

Some folks look at the skies and see only rain clouds and scuddy overcast. They see nothing but danger in the mist.

Not McKeon. He sees rainbows, following winds, and sheer opportunity rising with the first light of each new day.

Baseball owners have been told to halt all preparations for getting underway into spring training. The physical movements may stop, but there is no way to stop a dreamer.

McKeon is already playing the season. He knows his lineup. He leaves himself room for a few moves, but he knows who he wants of the field and in the batting order.

"We'll lead off with Bip (Roberts) and Robbie (Alomar)," McKeon confided to the premiere audience. "Then we'll have Tony (Gwynn), Jack (Clark), and Joe Carter. And behind them, we've still got Bennie (Santiago), Fred Lynn, 'Tempy' (Gary Templeton), 'Pags' (Mike Pagliarulo) and a who knows. Maybe another trade."

In these mental flights of baseball fancy, McKeon gets almost perfect pitching from Bruce Hurst, Ed Whitson, Dennis Rasmussen, Andy Benes, Greg Harris and a healthy Eric Show.

Is there another Cy Young award winner there? The answer is not just probably, but very likely. The talent is primed for the fine tuning of the Padres resident genius pitching coach Pat Dobson. Mark Grant and Craig Lefferts offer Dobber similar opportunity in the relief department.

Meanwhile, Los Caballeros, the action arm of the Yuma Chamber of Commerce that serves as the Padres preparation platoon, is busy getting Desert Sun Stadium ready for a full schedule of spring training games. The three weekend series slated for Yuma are already sold out.

Baseball strike? You bet. Same as always. Three strikes and you're out. Now let's get the 1990 season underway.

From Where I Sit

by Frank Andrews

Little Frankie

Our trek north to Sacramento for the recent Christmas Holidays brought back some stormy memories. Fighting the rain and snow was very reminiscent of another exciting trip my wife, Willie, and I made several years ago to "Colorful Colorado".

After purchasing a beautiful 6 acre spot of "Paradise" located in Mancos Valley just west of Durango, Colorado, we proceeded to build our "Dream House".

About once a month we would load our Jeep Cherokee and trailer to over capacity with building materials purchased in San Diego for the long trip and a weekend of hard work.

The distance is 800 miles and takes about 16 hours of tiresome driving in good weather. We left our home in Lemon Grove at 5:00 a.m. on my birthday, December 23rd, not heeding the weather report of blizzard conditions in Southwestern Colorado.

I had lashed a big picture window to the top carriers of the Cherokee and loaded a 4 x 4 bundle of eight foot studs in the two wheel trailer. The first excitement of that memorable trip happened as we were passing through "Devil's Canyon" just East of San Diego. The wind caught the picture window on top of my vehicle and sailed it over the mountains, shattering like an explosion. We stopped only long enough to regain our composure and realize how little we had saved by buying the window in San Diego.

We made it to Cortez, Colorado, by 9:00 p.m. that same day without further incident. Cortez was only 15 miles from our destination so Willie suggested, "Let's have your Birthday Party at the Pony Express. They have the most delicious fried chicken."

"What the heck! We're so close to Mancos now. Let's go for it." I agreed.

While we were having our little celebration the blizzard really got up. I fought the blinding, blowing snow until we got about 1/2 mile from our new home. As I was inching our way down the last little incline of glare-ice I ran head-on into a big fat cow that was coming up the middle of the road. She didn't see us and I couldn't see her until it was too late.

Our Jeep knocked the big cow down and bounced us, trailer and all, in and out of the ditch. We ended up back on the road again with no apparent damage to us or our equipment, but what to do with that poor animal groaning on her side in the middle of the road?

I headed for the only light that I could make out in that awful snow-blinding blizzard. The man I woke up was the Bishop of the local Mormon Church. He most graciously righted the wronged animal and as soon as she was up on her feet she again headed out into the stormy night.

"That fat cow is looking for a place to have her calf," the Bishop related.

Just a short while later Willie and I were warm and cozy snuggled in our sleeping bags in front of the fireplace of our partially finished home thanking God for the safe but eventful trip.

The next morning we were awakened by our neighbor, Mr. Hall. "I'm here to see if you are all right after hitting my old Bessie last night during the storm. She had her calf. Mother and son are doing just fine. We named the cute little critter 'Frankie' after you, Frank, as you are his 'Good Samaritan'.

At Issue -- Adoption

by Carol Bentley

Assemblywoman, Seventy-seventh District

Everyone is well aware of the issue with a capital "A". Yet there is another issue with a small "a" which should be a capital... that is ADOPTION.

In 1970 there were 90,000 children adopted; it dropped to 25,000 last year. Current estimates indicate 40 to 50 families are waiting to adopt every available baby.

We are all alarmed at the increase in teenage pregnancy. However, only 2% of pregnant teenagers chose adoption.

Results from a national study indicate that 60 percent of welfare recipient women, under age 30, had been a teenage parent.

An informal study revealed that adoption is never discussed in about 85% of classes dealing with families. Information on the adoption process is not supplied to teachers.

To deal with this situation and increase awareness of the adoption option, I have introduced Assembly Bill 2071. This bill establishes four regional workshops designed to educate teachers on the adoption process. Last week, AB2071 was approved by the Assembly Education Committee.

The intent of the workshops is to provide information on all aspects of adoption in order to dispel the negative attitudes currently held by our young people.

By providing this information, teenagers who do become pregnant may give more consideration to adoption as an alternative to abortion. It will also inform students who eventually may want to adopt children of their own.

Joe Freed on the Movies

This week's movie: Music Box

Michael Laszlo might be considered a model citizen. A Hungarian immigrant after World War II, he has adopted fierce loyalty to his new nation and has even gone as far as to publicly attack communism and anyone associated with it. His daughter is a lawyer in Chicago. His son served in Vietnam.

But something about Michael Laszlo just isn't right-- there are too many mysteries surrounding his past. Government officials suddenly revoke his citizenship and threaten to send him back to Hungary...to be tried for Nazi war atrocities.

Who is Michael Laszlo? A loving father and provider? Or a vicious murderer from an evil past?

Director Costa-Gavras, screenwriter Joe Eszterhas and producer Irwin Winkler team up once again (their last collaboration was the failed thriller "Betrayed") for this story about loyalty, deceit and the price of honesty.

Jessica Lange stars as Ann Talbot, Laszlo's daughter who must defend his right to citizenship by proving him innocent. East-German actor Armin Mueller-Stahl is Laszlo and Frederic Forrest is the federal prosecutor who wants to find someone (anyone?) guilty, so that society does not forget the horrors of its past. Each actor does a fine job in their role, (although Mueller-Stahl's heavy accent often makes it impossible to understand him), and Jessica Lange again proves herself a talented actress. She shows incredible depth as her character struggles with the inner conflict between her duty to the law and her duty to her father.

However, for all its acting merits "Music Box" fails to succeed as a sophisticated thriller. Screenwriter Joe Eszterhas takes far too long getting the trial started and the first half of the film is very slow. Eszterhas did have his moments of genuine intrigue, but the creeping pace created gaps between interesting scenes.

Director Costa-Gavras has kept the plotline going a bit more effectively than he did in "Betrayed," but many camera movements seem misused and out of place. Sincere melodrama was met with a racing sweep of the camera and hysteria was seen through a lense which seemed lifeless and uninvolved.

Ultimately, the greatest thrill of "Music Box" comes not from a plot twist or some surprise, but rather from the realization that this muddled mess was over.

Cadillac Man

Roger Donaldson ("No Way Out," "Cocktail"), directs star Robin Williams in the comedy-thriller surrounding the evil world of car salesmen. Williams is a luxury car salesman, a compulsive womanizer who juggles three different women, including his ex-wife. Tim Robbins ("Bull Durham") is a jealous husband who is certain that Williams has stolen his wife. To settle things he does what any calm, rational man would do--he takes the entire dealership hostage.

La Boheme - an opera for lovers

by Paul Treske

If it is true that all the world loves a good love story then it must be equally true that Puccini's "La Boheme" is the world's favorite opera. Currently at the Civic Theater with remaining performances scheduled on January 26, 28 and 31, the San Diego Opera's production of "La Boheme" is a treat both for the ears and eyes. Since its premiere in 1896, opera goers have thrilled to Puccini's soaring romantic melodies and laughed and cried with the young Paris bohemians as they struggle with life, love and, ultimately, death. Some of its appeal is surely due to its characters being very human, ordinary people; not the gods, goddesses, kings and queens of most other operas.

Special credit in this production goes to Opera Director Ian Campbell who has cast the young bohemians so well. They are all played by youthful appearing and vigorous singer-actors whose vitality makes the emotional scenes especially poignant. There is nothing so disruptive to modern day opera than having a fragile dying young heroine portrayed by a 50-year-old, 300 pound diva. In this "La Boheme," the fragile Mimi is played by Hungarian soprano, Ilona Tokody, whose slim and waifish appeal made her loves and eventual death especially touching. Welsh tenor Dennis O'Neill, although short and rather plump, sang ardently and with great warmth.

Most certainly there were shortcomings; voices sometimes a bit dry and harsh and group scenes a little sluggish, but who cares? For opera lovers who want a well sung, marvellous looking and vital production... with a good dose of tears at the finale, this "La Boheme" is just the ticket.

David and Nancy Barnhart with their canine companions in training, Nuemann and McAlister.

"We get to hand the dog to the physically challenged person," Barnhart said, "That's out paycheck, to see the dogs in service and happily placed."

Barnhart's two previous puppies didn't quite graduate to become CCI dogs, but that doesn't mean all of her hard work was wasted.

"Our first CCI puppy is now a bomb sniffing dog for the San Diego Sheriff's Department," she said. "She's in training to sniff bombs at the airport. She didn't have the right temperament for a CCI dog."

Barnhart's second dog had bad hips, so she was adopted by a family.

Raising a CCI puppy is a financial as well as emotional investment. The raiser is responsible for feeding, transporting and maintaining the health of their puppies.

"We get a lot of help along the way, though," said Barnhart. "Science Diet gives us food and our vet just charges us expenses."

The dogs are constantly being exposed to new situations and taken to public places, so that they can get used to the realities of everyday life. They often accompany their raisers shopping, at work, at school or on buses and trolleys.

"It's important to introduce them to things that people run into everyday," she said. "One of the CCI dog's biggest jobs is to act as a bridge between the able-bodied and the physically challenged."
